The practice of CPD October 2014

The following news reports, journal articles and documents are either freely available online, or they are available from Oxford Health Libraries electronically or in print. Please follow links to access full text online, contact the library service at library.enquiries@oxfordhealth.nhs.uk to order copies, or call into your nearest library.

The state of medical education and practice in the UK 2014

General Medical Council

The findings of this report show significant increases in the number of women becoming surgeons and specialists in emergency medicine. At the same time, the profession as a whole will soon have equal numbers of men and women doctors – already women account for 44% of all registered doctors and more than half of medical students are female. There has also been a shift in the pattern of doctors from overseas coming to work here. In the past, the largest source of overseas-trained doctors was south Asia, but recently there has been a sharp rise in doctors coming to work here from southern Europe.

One in eight GPs have insufficient evidence to complete revalidation

GP Online 14 October 2014

More than half of all GPs in England have successfully completed revalidation, but one in eight of those scheduled to undergo the process had it deferred due to 'insufficient evidence'.

Future GPs need resilience training to avoid burnout

GP Online 15 October 2014

GP trainees should receive structured courses on resilience to prepare them for the workload and pressure of general practice and to help combat burnout in the profession, leading GP educators have warned.

Reform medical education to shift NHS work into primary care, says report

GP Online 21 October 2014

All links are provided for information only. A link does not imply endorsement of that site.

Brought to you by Oxford Health Library Service