Children's Community Occupational Therapy Discharge Process

Why is your child being discharged from occupational therapy (OT)?

If a child's or young person's physical skills are in line with the rest of their learning, then they are unlikely to require specific ongoing support from an OT.

Their physical development and independence skills will continue to develop through exposure, skill breakdown and practice at home and school.

Children will also be considered for discharge if all functional goals have been met, and if needs are unlikely to change in the foreseeable future.

What happens when they are discharged ?

When your child is discharged from OT Service, their Education Health Care Plan (EHCP) is changed to say that they no longer require specific input from OT (if applicable.)

The OT will no longer see your child specifically and reports will not be written for their annual review.

What happens with the discharge process?

Should you have any concerns regarding repairs of equipment or equipment is no longer required, please contact NRS on 01869-225420. If you feel any equipment needs to be re-assessed, please contact your therapist directly or contact your local admin team (info on back).

Once your child is discharged

Continue to implement OT recommendations given for your child. For further advice on developing skills, please see our website for activity ideas and strategies in the first instance.

Re-referrals

We offer an open access re-referral system. A re-referral to the OT Service can be made at any time if new needs are identified and support from the website has been trialed.
